

KATBOT

TRYING TO SCORE

Jr. and Rocky are under the bleachers watching the cheerleader tryouts. Jr. has a serious crush on DARCY DUMONT –the cutest most wonderlicious girl at Smucker Middle School. But alas, Darcy only pays attention to football studs. Jr. makes a proclamation to Rocky: “I shall win Darcy’s heart by making the squad-age.”

Rocky reminds Jr. that he has tried to win Darcy’s heart by making the football team since like forever – “remember last year, dude?” Rocky pulls out his cell phone and calls up three saved images: The first image shows Jr. being punted though the air instead of the football. The second image shows Jr. under a pile of linebackers with a football stuck in his mouth. And the last image shows Jr. naked to the waist hanging by his boxers off the goalpost.

Jr. pleads with Katbot – he needs her help to make the team - Katbot finally relents when Jr. says that this adventure would provide her with a thesis for this months report – “The social implications of winning and some junk.”

Katbot uses her robotic hyperbeam to help Jr. single handedly lead the team to a first game win. (NOTE: throughout this episode, Marcella Curd will comically be spying on Jr. - trying to figure out the truth about Katbot)

After the first game win, Darcy is suddenly all about Jr. And Katbot is suddenly all about winning. A little taste of victory has made her hungry for more, More MORE!

And so she uses her hyperbeam to make Jr. drive the team to winning the State Championships!

Thanks to national news coverage of the win, the recruiter from the Cleveland Browns spots Jr.. Jr. is suddenly the youngest running back in NFL history!

In a MONTAGE we see Jr. Lebore lead the team to the Superbowl. With each game, Katbot becomes increasingly more crazed with the thrill of the win. At the worst possible moment, Katbot’s hyperbeam sputters and gives out sending Jr. loop-de-looping around the stadium. Why does this happen? It is Professor Meew – he has been watching the Super Bowl via satellite and has pulled the plug on Katbot’s powers. Katbot cannot possibly explore the “social implications of winning” if she is using her powers to cheat.

Jr. goes on to score the final touchdown anyway and Katbot changes her thesis to “Winning feels even better when you come by it fair and square